Special Correspondence from Near-by Towns.

DOYLESTOWN.

Town Council has another trolley matter on hand which will create some discussion before it is disposed of to the satisfaction of the public. It is an ordinance presented by the Doylestown Railway Company for right of way into the borough for a road the company intends to build from New Hope to Doylestown. Council decided to stop the company at the intersection of Ashland and Green streets, when it was desired to run to the western limits of the town. This was a disappointment, but was not nearly so serious a matter as the injection into the ordinance of a section providing that the company should pave the street between rails and two feet outside with Belgian blocks, and macadamize from the blocks to the curb on either side. The street is not extensively traveled, and the expense involved would be, the company declares, something like $10,000 or $15,000. They will not, therefore, accept the ordinance as amended, the officials say, but will try to effect another entrance into town, but one less desirable to the public, if the ordinance is not changed. The company is willing to macadamize the street. It is the opinion of many people that it would be absurd to put down a street of the kind described, as it would be a very noisy thoroughfare to live upon if used extensively, and if it were not used the pavement would be useless. Council has been unfortunate in attempting to look after the borough's interests, as the presence of the trolley roads will be of far more advantage to the town than streets laid with Belgian blocks. It is said the promoters of the New Hope road have excellent financial backing and that the railway will be one of the best constructed in this section of the country. The ordinance will be disposed of at the next regular meeting of Town Council.

Plain matter assaults on the administration, trusts and tariff that appear daily in the local organs of Democracy indicate that the Presidential campaign has opened in this region. The party paper in Bucks, the Democrat, is ready to publish anything that may issue from National headquarters. Whether the party will endorse a platform similar to that adopted in '96 remains to be seen, but many Democrats at the county seat will eat a tremendous lot of crow if they support the ticket. It is likely, however, that some of the younger members of the party here will not be caught outside the camp again, as the sound money faction in '96 did not carry the weight it was assumed they would before that memorable campaign was finished.

Two interesting strangers wheeled into town on Saturday. They were Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Bentley, who are traveling from Atlantic City to San Francisco on bicycles. The couple came from Chicago to Atlantic City, Mr. Bentley seeking in this way to regain his health. He has improved so much with the exercise that he decided upon the California trip. He rides a wheel with double frame and eight foot chain, the box containing the effects of the travelers being strapped on the rear frame.

Fourth of July in Doylestown was destined to be a quiet affair this year, as no preparation was made for a public demonstration. The Country Club arranged to have a display of fireworks, as did a few individuals, while others found enjoyment away from town. It has been the custom to have speech making and an elaborate fireworks display for the public, but the enthusiasm has died out of the few public spirited citizens who not only managed the affair but paid many of the bills.

The third anniversary of the pasterate of Rev. James R. Bergey, pastor of Salem Reformed church, was observed on Sunday morning. The membership of the church has increased in the three years Mr. Bergey has been pastor from 133 to 256, indicating that there has been much earnest work done by Mr. Bergey. During the past year 38 members were added to the congregation. The pastor preached 136 sermons and delivered 70 addresses.

George P. Brock, assistant cashier of the National Bank, has gone to Canada with a party of capitalists interested in the development of mines and manufacturing industries in the Lake Superior region about Sault Ste. Marie. Several of the U. G. I. officials are members of the party, which travels in luxurious fashion by private car and boats. A similar trip was taken last fall by the same party.

Many residents of Doylestown regret that the Damrosch orchestra has closed its engagement at Willow Grove Park. The music has been a great source of pleasure to the public, and Doylestown has been well represented this season at both afternoon and evening concerts.

PENN'S MANOR.

The C. E. Society held its monthly business meeting on Monday evening in the chapel.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Weiss was gladdened by the arrival of a young daughter.

Mrs. Raine, of Philadelphia, is spending a few days with Mrs. Rose Ritchie.

On last Thursday morning, the tobacco growers here were as busy as bees getting in their last crop transplanted for this season. The field was in fine order for planting all day.

Harvesting is pretty well advanced and at the end of the week it will be practically over, with the exception of some few behind timers, and the oats, which will be short.

Arrangements have been made by the Ladies' Aid Society to hold a lawn social on next Saturday evening, July 7th, in the beautifully shaded yard of the chapel. All friends and well-wishers are cordially invited to participate in the feast, for ice cream, confectionery, etc., will be abundantly provided. Proceeds for the benefit of the chapel.

On last Sunday evening, after the close of the C. E. S. meeting, held in the chapel, Rev. A. S. Pettenger opened service by singing and prayer, after which he gave a brief address to a full-sized audience. Afterwards he gave an invitation to all who felt the need to come and partake of the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Quite a number came forward, thankful for the privilege, to participate in this solemn and holy act. After closing all went to their homes with joyful hearts.

ATTLEBORO.

A telephone in the house of W. D. Lukens, superintendent of the electric light plant, was burned one day last week. The cause originating from the crossing of the trolley wires.

The school directors of the borough held their last meeting for the Summer on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the home of W. A. Melcher. The late storm rendered the lights in the school house unfit for use.

A severe thunder-storm occured in this locality Wednesday night. A telegraph pole opposite Mr. Pennick's milk depot was struck and shivered by lightning, the pieces flying in every direction. Many window panes were shivered to atoms.

County Superintendent Slotter examined a class of six at Gardenville on Monday and three of them were successful. They were Miss Maggie Nice, Miss Lizzie Cooper and John Snyder. They have applied for schools in Plumstead.

TULLYTOWN.

Miss Elizabeth Davis was visiting friends in Trenton last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Denham, of Germantown, were visiting relatives here last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wolfe, of Kensington, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Garretson.

Ezra Garforth and Thomas Howard and son, of Philadelphia, were visiting Mr. A. R. Wagenknight last Sunday.

Mrs. W. H. Skirm, Jr., and son, of Trenton, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Amos B. Headley, Mrs. Skirm's parents, from Saturday to Monday.

On next Wednesday evening the 11th inst., the officers of Tullytown Castle, No. 499, K. G. E., will be installed. Deputy Chief Angus, of Bristol, is expected to install the officers, and it is desired that as many members as can will be present.

The annual outing of the members of council of the city of Trenton was held last Thursday on the grounds of the Penn Country Club here. Most of the political leaders of Trenton and Mercer county were on hand and all apparently enjoyed the day, many expressing surprise that they never knew there was such a spot along the river as that occupied by the P. C. C.

The regular meeting of council, which should have been held last Monday evening, was dispensed with as only one member of council, Henry Lovett, made his appearance at the hall. It seems hardly just that the men who are elected by the people to do the business of the borough, should not be able to attend a meeting once a month for the purpose of transacting borough business; as a result of the neglect of councilmen to meet last Monday the bills will have to be carried over to next month.

The chicken supper and social for the benefit of the M. E Church, on the lawn of Mr. Harry Simpson, last Thursday evening, proved to be the largest and most successful entertainment yet given for the benefit of the church. Between three and four hundred guests enjoyed the supper, and but for the threatening clouds, there would no doubt have been a general clearing out of the ice cream, fruits and candies that were for sale. As it was, however, the debt fund was probably increased by $100, and too much cannot be said in praise of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Simpson, Mr. Elliot and their aids for the successful manner with which the affair was carried out.

An event that cast a gloom over the Penn Country Club and in fact over the whole of Tullytown, where the deceased was so universally liked, was the accidental drowning of James S. Miller, of Trenton, one of the most popular young men of the Penn Country Club. With several guests from the South End Wheelmen, of Trenton, he started out shortly after three o'clock in the afternoon for a sail in a small sailboat, the property of some of the members of the club. Mr. Miller sat in the bow of the boat when the second boat load was being carried from the Tullytown steamboat wharf to the sailboat in a small skiff. In some way the boat either swamped or overturned and the four occupants struggled in the water. The other three men reached the sailboat, which was but a few yards away. Miller sank after a short struggle, and John Madely, who saw him go under, dove for him from the sailboat, but did not find him. As soon as the news of the drowing spread through the town, many willing hands were ready to aid in the search for the body. George H. Johnson at length recovered the body a little up the river from where it went down and about one hour and a half after the drowning. Coroner Kunsman gave a certificate of accidental drowning.

Mr. Miller was a traveling salesman for the Empire Rubber Company, of Trenton, and had the best of prospects for a successful business career. Young, active, genial and pleasant always, without any bad habits whatever, he was one of the most popular young men in Trenton, and the members of the Penn Country Club and its friends will mourn for him as for a friend whose vacant chair it will be hard indeed to fill and none more than they will realize how hard it is to say, "Thy Will be Done." A large number of friends will follow him to the grave today at 2 o'clock.

In some of the Swiss valleys the inhabitants are all afflicted with goitre or "thick neck." Instead of regarding this as a deformity they seem to think it a natural feature of physical development, and tourists passing through the valleys are sometimes jeered by the goitrous inhabitants, because they are without this offensive swelling. Thus a form of disease may become so common that it is regarded as a natural and necessary condition of life. It is so, to a large extent, with what are called diseases of women. Every woman suffers more or less from irregularity, ulceration, debilitating drains, or female weakness, and this suffering is so common and so universal that many women accept it as a condition natural and necessary to their sex. But it is a condition as unnatural as it is unnecessary. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription strengthens the delicate womanly organs and regulates the womanly functions, so that woman is practically delivered from the pain and misery which eat up ten years of her life—between the ages of fifteen and forty-five. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well.

For Congress--7th District,

IRVING P. WANGER.

The Democrats of Bucks county are at a serious disadvantage in not having any legitimate newspaper to support their interests.

Colonel Barnett, who saw service in the Philippines, is ready and eager to raise a regiment for Chinese service. Probably Colonel Wanamaker will call his parlor regiment together for an afternoon tea.

A New York woman has sued for divorce on the grounds that her husband compels her to wear his old trousers. This is the first instance on record of a wife's objection to the wearing of the family breeches.

The editor of the Limerick, Montgomery county "News" offers a peculiar reason for wishing to dispose of his newspaper property. The last issue contains the following notice:

Owing to family difficulties the "News" office is for sale or can be leased by a good responsible party at once.

Bryan is greater than his party. Single handed and alone he has kept himself to the front during an exceedingly prosperous Republican administration, after being soundly whipped at the polls. After the fight of 1896 Bryan's obituary was written but the corpse refused to be buried. Despite the efforts of powerful Eastern Democrats Bryan has kept himself so effectually in the foreground that no other Democratic Presidential candidate has been even a remote possibility. Army and navy heroes have not had a ghost of a show with the Old Boy Orator in the field.

Governor Roosevelt is a distinctive and peculiar character. He is a combination of the rough and ready plainsman and gentleman of society. He is learned in literature and versed in the science of government. He can "bust" a broncho as easily as he can pen a thesis with ancient history for a topic. He can fight with his fists or lead a cotillion. His ancestry is a mixture of Dutch, Irish, French and American. Roosevelt is peculiarly a Fifth Avenue and Murray Hill product. He played when a boy in Madison Square, and he lived from the time he left the nursery until he entered Harvard College not only under the distinctive New York city influences, but in that exclusive shell into which penetrate only the Fishs, the Van Rensselaers, the Livingstons and others of that truly cultivated and gentle group which is, after all, the real aristocracy of New York.

The wretched insurgent tactics used in Pennsylvania politics are being constantly revealed in their true light. The villification of Colonel Quay was answered by a National convention, and now the National government has given its quiet but effective proof of disapproval upon the cowardly actions during the last State campaign, when the commander of the Fighting Tenth was maligned by stay-at-home critics.

Colonel James E. Barnett, of the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, has received assurances from the War Department that he shall be the first given a commission to recruit a volunteer regiment in Pennsylvania for foreign service.

Colonel Barnett said that should he be empowered to raise a regiment he will open recruiting offices in all the towns in which the old Tenth has companies, thus insuring the enlistment of the majority of those who saw service in the Philippines.

The Democratic party is a party of dead issues. Democratic campaign crys of the past are hushed in death. Free silver is now uttering its death rattle, and only breathes because of the artificial respiration caused by the pumping of air into the corpse by Bryan, who is the sole dictator of the party. Tariff reform which occupied the attention of Democracy during the Cleveland campaign, is as dead as the mummies of Egypt. Senator Lodge, in his great speech at the Republican convention, said:

"For ten years the artificial agitation in behalf of what was humorously called tariff reform, and of what was really free trade, had kept business in a ferment, and had brought a Treasury deficit, paralyzed industries, depression, panic, and, finally, continuous bad times, to a degree never before imagined. Would you know the result of our tariff legislation? Look about you! Would you measure its success? Recollect that it is no longer an issue; that our opponents, free traders as they are, do not dare to make it an issue; that there is not a State in the Union today which could be carried for free trade against protection. Never was a policy more fully justified by its works. Never was a promise made by any party more absolutely fulfilled."

TO SOLVE THE CHINESE PROBLEM.

With the continuation of the disorder of China, which is rapidly spreading to new provinces and has developed from the riotous proceedings of the members of a secret society to the outbreak of masses, aided by the army, for the annihilation of all foreigners, it is self-evident that the Chinese government is powerless to maintain order and protect the lives and property of foreigners, and it is equally apparent that the empress dowager and her advisers are in sympathy with the movement.

The firing on the allied fleets by the Taku forts was a declaration of war, if done by authority; if not, it was an additional reason for the powers to take vigorous action.

Large forces of American, Russian, Japanese, German and British marines have been sent to the Chinese capital to relieve the foreign ambassadors and missionaries, whose lives have been endangered and where death has already occurred to a foreign minister, and where legations, including that of the United States, have been destroyed.

The fact that the life of a foreign minister should be endangered in any event shows the necessity of strong reformatory measures with a people who ignore every rule of civilization.

The Chinese problem, which has been apparent for many years, must now be solved. The western nations will not be performing their duty if they do not once for all take such measures as will secure the safety of their people and safeguard their growing interests in China. Sooner or later the problem must be solved, either by the division of the empire or an effort to govern it through Chinese officials under sufficient guarantees for the preservation of peace and the observance of treaty regulations. This last solution cannot be hoped for nor expected with the present female Machiavelli on the throne. With the dowager empress and her advisers in control no reasonable security can be guaranteed. They have shown that they cannot or will not perform the first duties of a government, but instead have aided disorder and anarchy.

In the settlement of the Chinese problem the United States must take an important part. The interests of this nation in China are the safety of our citizens and the security of our rights guaranteed by treaty and by international law. So far as the interests of other powers are identical we may act with them, but the limits of co-operation must be confined by the limit of common interests. We can have no part with any power or combination of powers which may seek to obtain undue control in China that cannot be shared by others.

That point reached, it will be the duty to proclaim clearly and concisely its rights and claims, and that whatever rights and claims we may have with reference to the present government of China must continue and be acknowledged by any other nation that shall supersede the Chinese authority in whole or in part. Our commercial and industrial interests as well as the safety of our citizens come under the same conditions, and must receive like consideration

The interests of the United States, like those of all other nations, require the existence of a stable, efficient and responsible government, and it is of considerable importance to this country how those conditions are secured. If the empire is to be dismembered and divided among the different nations, the "open door" to our commerce must be maintained, as well as security and equal rights to our citizens. It must not be lost sight of that in the event of foreign control the task of governing the hundreds of millions of Chinese people, with their different customs and dialects, will be difficult and dangerous. The resistance would be liable to break out at any time into active violence with results too appalling to contemplate, and in such event the commercial interests of all would be seriously damaged or destroyed.

The plan of some form of native government aided and practically maintained by foreign powers would seem the wisest and most easily accomplished. Such a plan would be more acceptable to the United States than the division into "spheres of influence" among the European powers, with the dangers already referred to. In case we are compelled to a choice of a native government backed by only a portion of the powers, it will be wiser for this government to side with a coalition shared by Great Britain, Germany and Japan rather than with one in which Russia is dominant. It is to be hoped, however, that all the powers will act in harmony on just and helpful lines which will secure an adjustment equally just and advantageous to all.

The women suffragists of the country have offered a plank to be used in the construction of the Democratic National platform, which reads as follows:

"RESOLVED, That we favor the submission by Congress to the various State Legislatures of an amendment to the Federal Constitution forbidding disfranchisement of United States citizens on account of sex."

The government of the United States will never be a truly representative government until the women of the country are granted the right to have a vote at all elections. It adds not to the dignity of this nation that unwise laws permit the Italian, the Pole, the Hungarian or the off-scouring of any old nation to come to our shores and have a voice in the direction of the government, while native born women, who aid in the support of the government, women whose intellects are the equal of the brightest masculine minds; women who are capable of managing intricate business affairs; women famed in art and literature, are denied the privilege of casting a ballot. The law which denies female suffrage is unwise, unpatriotic and unjust. Surely it cannot be deemed that evil effects will follow in the trail of the votes of women? Why the objection? We have yet to hear a sound argument contrary to the proposition.

No political party has ever met under such favorable circumstances as did the Republican national convention in Philadelphia. The unanimous nomination of both the candidates for the offices of President and Vice-President was unprecedented. Mr. McKinley has earned, and well deserves, the compliment. The prosperity of the country under his administration alone merits it, without taking into consideration his able conduct of our affairs of state during the war with Spain. There was a notable difference between the harmony of the Republican party at St. Louis, in the convention of 1896, and at Philadelphia. Last month every Republican was working for the strongest ticket, and there was a unanimous verdict for McKinley and Roosevelt. The latter has endeared himself to the people by his clean and honest administration of such public offices as he has held, as well as by his bravery in Cuba. They are both strong candidates, politically and personally, and will gain in strength as the campaign progresses.

Idle men, tramps and Coxey's armies furnished but poor markets for farm produce.

Mr. Bryan's return to the tax assessor has answered one of his pet arguments. Mr. Bryan is not growing poorer.

The Treasury Department has made a net saving, to June 1, of $7,268,818 on the refunding provision of the gold standard law.

The Democrats of Milwaukee have nominated Peck's Bad Boy for Congress. Representative Lentz was a sufficiency in that particular line.

Do not lose sight of the Dingley bill as having been passed under this Administration. It opened the mills and gave wage-earners a chance to earn a living.

Kansas City is the hub of the great prosperity belt. The Kansas and Missouri farmers never were so prosperous. It is not an ideal place for a calamity gathering.

Of over 200,000 men enrolled in the American armies during the war of 1812, there is but one single man who remains on the pension rolls of the United States. This lonely veteran is Hiram Cronk, of Dunn Brook, Oneida county, a man 100 years old.

There was more important legislation transacted during the last session of Congress than in any other similar period. At the next session two of the most important measures will be the Nicaraguan Canal construction bill and the restoration of American shipping.

Joe Manley is a veteran in attendance at political conventions. He has been officially connected with seven national conventions. Cincinnati in 1876, Chicago in 1880, 1884 and 1888, Minneapolis in 1892, St. Louis in 1896 and Philadelphia this year. "Never before," he says, "has a convention been handled under such perfect conditions as the one just closed. The convention hall surpassed in convenience, size, appointments and comfort any convention hall ever before erected." "The hospitality of the city of Philadelphia," he declares, "has been such that we can understand why it was that John Adams exclaimed on his return home after his first visit to Philadelphia 126 years ago; 'We take our departure from the happy, the peaceful, the elegant, the hospitable and the polite city of Philadelphia.'"

Last advices from Oregon show that the Republican pluralities in last month's elections in that State were larger than at first reported. The Republican candidate for Governor had a plurality of more than 10,000, almost exactly the same as it was in 1898. For Congressmen, the combined plurality of the two Republican candidates was about 11,500, or 2,800 more than the plurality given to the same candidate in 1898, and fully 10,000 larger than the straight Republican plurality of Congressmen in 1896. It should be remembered also that in 1896 there was no fusion of the opposition vote, whereas this year all the parties opposed to the Republicans formed as complete a fusion as was ever made. Besides this, Mr. Bryan had made a tour of Oregon a few weeks before the election.

Editor Johnson, of the North Wales "Record," who was secretary of the erstwhile anti-Quay League, of Montgomery county, we are pleased to note, has regained good political health and is no longer in that morbid state which only permitted a distressed view of contemporaneous political affairs. Editor Johnson has evidently had his fill of "insurgent" politics and is now enlisted under the banner of true Republicanism. The "Record" has ceased its attacks upon the major faction of the party and is making reparation for the former criticisms of Congressman Wanger and stalwart candidates. Last week's issue contains the following:

"Congressman Wanger had a walk-over at the Congressional Convention on Monday last. There was no opposing candidate, and he was nominated by acclamation. The Republicans of the Seventh district no longer believe in the nonsensical rotation system. Mr Wanger has proved himself a competent representative in Congress, and will probably be returned as long as he desires to represent the district."

The editor of Doylestown's leading paper, the Republican, was in Bristol attending the convention, and noticed the great industrial activity in the borough. In commenting upon the situation, Editor Sellers says:

There were thousands of people in Bristol on Monday who did not attend the Congressional Convention. They were too busy. They are the thousands of mill operatives who, under Republican prosperity, have all the work they can do. They remember, however, when they had plenty of time to do anything but work. That was during the business depression administration of President Cleveland when mills were idle and the operatives were in want. Then there was gloom in Bristol. Now there is the pleasing sunlight of prosperity. These workers who are entitled to vote must look at the coming election as an opportunity to vote to continue their present prosperity. They ought to appreciate the fact that every vote cast for the Republican ticket is a vote in favor of work and wages for themselves and happiness for their families. Every vote for the Democratic ticket will be a vote for uncertainty, then stagnation, then a return of the hard times that followed the last election of Cleveland.

The Philadelphia "Times," in conjunction with the New York "Herald," Springfield "Republican," and other newspapers of smaller calibre, is engaged in attacking the McKinley administration for defending the lives of Americans in China. The pretext offered by the "Times" in justification of its acts is that the administration is making war upon a friendly power without the consent of Congress. The President has declared no war against China, but what the President has done and is doing is to protect the lives and properties of American citizens in a foreign country, and notwithstanding the carping of the "Times" and others, such protection will be continued to be given as long as is necessary even if it takes the combined forces of the army and navy to do it. Is it possible that any American citizen can stand by and hurl slander at the supreme representative of the people for his action in endeavoring to guard the lives of citizens of the United States? It is a miserable spirit indeed that prompts the use of such subterfuges to make political capital of the righteous actions of a President who has developed a sadly needed firm foreign policy. President McKinley is acting clearly within the bounds of the Constitution and the effort made to rescue American missionaries from the murderous heathen will be applauded by every clear headed, fair minded citizen. The "Times" is developing strong Bryanite symptoms, and it is fully expected that during the coming campaign Editor McClure will have the "Times" back into the Democratic fold.

Politics in Bucks county is enjoying a much needed rest. Since the holding of the National and Congressional Republican conventions party discussions have been at a low ebb. The leaders' and workers' thoughts have turned to summer vacations and methods of keeping cool. The lull, however, will be of short duration, and by the middle of August the agitation incident to the strife for office will commence. The make-up of the local Legislative ticket is still uncertain. The present three members, Messrs. Edwards, Wilkinson and Winner, are candidates for re-nomination. There are no candidates in opposition to Edwards and Wilkinson, but it is very likely that John G. Weinberger, of Milford, will contest with Winner for the nomination. Mr. Weinberger is one of the solid men of the upper end and will in all probability relieve the nomination. It has been intimated that Winner, in the interest of harmony, will withdraw before the time of holding the September convention. For District Attorney there are two Republican candidates in the field, Joseph W. Shelly and John L. DuBois, Jr. Owing to the fact that Mr. Shelly has been an earnest and faithful party worker and is well and favorably known in every district he has a great advantage over his present opponent. There have been no candidates announced for the office of Prothonatary. The Democrats in the county appear to be playing a waiting game.

A correspondent in the New York "Sun" finds Bible authority for condemnation of the Bryan party. The correspondent writes as follows:

"And God spake all these words, saying:
"Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image.
"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.
"Thou shalt not kill.
"Thou shalt not steal.
"Thou shalt not bear false witness.
"Thou shalt not covet."

By this we learn that seven of the ten edicts promulgated by the Infinite Being are injunctions.

Finite man, believing this to be a reasonably high authority on which to base the rule of human conduct, has from time to time enacted laws restraining the evily disposed from unlawful trespass upon the property and rights of his fellows.

This supreme law of "government by injunction" has been thundered through the ages from Sinai to Bryan unchallenged, until in the interests of riot and disorder, the doughty Colonel draws his bloodless battle blade, and makes the bold announcement, "I am opposed to a government by injunction." And his followers in the Debs-Fusion-Democratic party are parroting back, "Me too."

The Colonel is not usually lacking in courage. Why not then step to the front, and say in unmistakable language just what he means: "I am opposed to a government by Law?" This might have the effect of clinching the support of Croker and Tammany.

I suggest this, as an old neighbor, in the interest of exact truth.

Even the Hatboro "Spirit" has succumbed to the inevitable. Mr. Wanger's service in Congress has been so faithful and with true regard to the people he represents that almost the last vestige of opposition, which abounded during his earlier campaigns, has disappeared. The "Spirit" says:

"Hon. I. P. Wanger should feel highly complimented at the action of the Republican convention at Bristol on Monday last, when he was accorded unanimously the nomination for another term in Congress. He has already served four terms and his constituents seem likely to keep on nominating and electing him as long as he desires to represent them in Washington."

The situation in China is desperate. All hopes of rescuing the ministers has been abandoned. War is inevitable, and the dismemberment of the Celestial Umpire will undoubtedly result.

A most frightful accident occured yesterday in Tacoma, Washington. A crowded trolley car plunged down a 125-foot gulch killing sixty-six people.

The attempt to nhminate Bryan with a hurrah yesterday failed. The hurrah exploded all right but the nomination fizzled

Lansdale Republican.

The renomination of Congressman Wanger, without a dessenting vote at Bristol Monday to represent Bucks and Montgomery counties in the halls of Congress for another term, is as deserving as it was cordial. For eight years he has performed that duty well. That he will be re elected this fall there is hardly a semblance of doubt. And there should not be. The people of the seventh district, a few years ago, had a taste of Democracy in Hallowell and want no more of it in Congress. With McKinley, Roosevelt and Wanger leading on the ticket a Republican majority of 2500 or 3000 in the county may be expected if all Republicans give the ticket the support it deserves.

As Moser Saw the Convention.

Collegeville Independent.

Hard by the western shore of the majestic Delaware, in the old town of Bristol where landmarks of the early days of the Republic are associated with the more modern improvements of the last quarter of a dying century; in a spacious one-story building erstwhile devoted to skating rink purposes, and upon which the scorching rays of the sun during a late day in June, there gathered on Monday representative disciples of the Republican party to re-nominate a candidate to serve the people of Montgomery and Bucks in the American House of Representatives at Washington. And they did it. * * * The people of Bristol treated the Convention people with much kindness and consideration, and the free boat ride from Philadelphia to Bristol and return was especially appreciated by the Montgomery delegates and their friends. Bristol deserves to have another and another Congressional Convention, without a repetition of strong pleading on the part of the * * * BRISTOL GAZETTE. * * * We neglected to say a word about the resolutions. Here it is: The resolutions resoluted various Republicans and Republican achievements straight to glory, without a change of engines.

We have always used the best Java and Mocha in our family, but I am free to say I like the GRAIN-O as well as the best coffee I ever drank.

Much comment has been made in political circles not only in this state, but in the national councils of the party, over a news dispatch from Philadelphia recently printed in the New York Sun.

This dispatch was headed "Hanna Down on Bolters, The Pennsylvania Insurgents Must Come Into Line."

AS THE "SUN" SEES IT.

The dispatch read:

"Just before starting for his home in Cleveland Senator Hanna made a call upon State Senator Magee, of Pittsburg, and remained with him for more than an hour. Senator Hanna asked Magee how many Republicans went into the caucus for United States senator at Harrisburg last January; how the vote stood, and the names of the senators and members of the house who went into that caucus and then refused to vote for the candidate of the caucus.

"National Chairman Hanna asked Magee if he believed there would be a repetition of that action next January when the legislature convenes for the election of a United States senator, and the Ohio senator clearly manifested his surprise when Magee flippantly informed him he thought there would be.

"Senator Hanna, after hearing all the facts in the case, told Magee that the spontaneous and so decidedly marked demonstration for Senator Quay on the part of delegates and people to the national convention from every state in the Union, and the unity of the Pennsylvania delegation in supporting Senator Quay, was a revelation to him, and that he desired to say to Senator Magee, so that he could communicate to those who, after taking part in a Republican caucus, refused to be bound by its action, that the administration desired party regularity; that the national committee would put its seal of condemnation upon all such proceedings as that which characterized the caucus of the Pennsylvania legislature last winter.

"Senator Hanna especially warned Senator Magee against entering into 'fusion' schemes for the election of 'insurgent' members of the legislature of Pennsylvania, as he feared it might not only lose a Republican senator, but might result in the defeat of probably four or five Republican congressmen in the state.

"From this time forth during the next four years regularity of party usage will prevail with Republicans of Pennsylvania, as Senator Hanna's parting injunction to Magee was:

"'There must be no sulking in Pennsylvania this campaign.'"

Seeds Planted In Eggshells.

Of course you have read Celia Thaxter's "My Garden," but have you, amateur gardeners, remembered a little plan of hers for planting seeds, flower seeds, in eggshells? You know, you just fill half a shell with good rich earth, stick in a seed or two, stand the shells up in a box of earth, keep them warm and moist, and then, when you think you can trust the weather out of doors and the seeds have sprouted, you knock the shell off and put the little ball of earth into Mother Earth, and there you are. Not a root has been disturbed, and if you choose a favorable time for transplanting there will not be a wilted leaf to retard the growing of the plant.—Boston Transcript

The Germ of Bad Manners.

"Independence is a trait I like in Americans," said a girl near me the other day "To think that 'I am as good as every one else' puts a strain of confidence into me."

"That same reflection, 'I am as good as every one else,' is at the bottom of a great deal of our proverbial bad manners," was the reply. "Would it not be better to think 'every one else is as good as I am?'" It certainly is a commendable trait to be self reliant so far as material affairs are concerned, but there is an equality of worth to be recognized in others which is above the obligations to self.—Ada C. Sweet in Woman's Home Companion.

Women and War.

We women teach our little sons how wrong
And how ignoble blows are. School and church
Support our precepts and inculcate
The growing minds with thoughts of love and peace.
"Let dogs delight to bark and bite," we say,
But human beings with immortal souls
Must rise above the methods of the brute
And walk with reason and with self control.

And then—dear God, you men, you wise, strong men,
Our self announced superiors in brain,
Our peers in judgment, you go forth to war!
You leap at one another, mutilate
And starve and kill your fellow men and ask
The world's applause for such heroic deeds.
You boast and strut, and if no song is sung,
No laudatory epic writ in blood,
Telling how many widows you have made,
Why then, perforce, you say our bards are dead
And inspiration sleeps to wake no more.
And we, the women, we whose lives you are,
What can we do but sit in silent homes
And wait and suffer? Not for us the blare
Of trumpets and the bugle's call to arms—
For us no waving banners, no supreme,
Triumphant hour of conquest. Ours the slow
Dread torture of uncertainty, each day
The bloodless battle with the same despair,
And when at best your victories reach our ears
There reaches with them to our pitying hearts
The thought of countless homes made desolate
And other women weeping for their dead.

O men, wise men, superior beings, say,
Is there no substitute for war in this Great age and era? If you answer "No,"
Then let us rear our children to be wolves
And teach them from the cradle how to kill.
Why should we women waste our time and words
In talking peace when men declare for war?
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in New York Journal.

Olivia Williams, a colored belle, swore out a warrant on last Friday evening for the arrest of Joseph Lewis, also colored, alleging that Joseph had struck her in the mouth with his fist. The work of resurfacing Radcliffe street is progressing favorably. The top dressing has been put on from Mill to Dorrance streets. The light roller belonging to the borough has been used to make a hard surface, but without much success. A ten-ton steam roller, belonging to Walter West, of Trenton, is expected to arrive tomorrow and will be put upon the street. Mr. West has built a number of State roads in New Jersey, and his big steam roller is calculated to put Radcliffe street in a first-class condition.

More women are now noticed in the hay fields and performing outside work on the farms in Eastern Pennsylvania than has been known since the civil war. This is attributed to the fact that the young men in the rural districts have secured work in the iron mills and other industries in the cities.

The financial statement of the Quakertown school district, soon to be published, shows the receipts to have been $20,118 63 and the expenditures $20,001 92. Rev. S. B. Williams, pastor of the Chalfont Union Methodist Episcopal Church, has a novel plan to bring members of his flock to services His plan is not to deliver a sermon unless at least twenty-five persons are present. La Shell, now a resident of Denver, Colorado, who went West from Newtown some thirty-two years ago and grew up with the country, accumulating quite a competency, returned last week on a visit to relatives and friends. Census Enumerator Cyrus Hillborn has completed the enumeration of the inhabitants of Newtown borough and township. There are in the borough 1461 people and in the township 715. Ten years ago the borough figures were 1213 and the township's 760. Thus the former gains 248 and the latter loses 45. In the aggregate it is a gain of nearly 9. 4 5 per cent. If the same increase is maintained throughout, the county's population is now about 79,000, as against 70,615 ten years ago. But so large a gain will not be maintained. Nearly all the townships will show a loss, says the "Enterprise."

James V. Randall has cleared away the wreck of his barn and carriage warehouse, burned early on the morning of June 7th, across Newtown creek, in Newtown township, preparatory to rebuilding. No clue has yet been obtained as to the origin of the fire, neither has there been to the burning of the barn of John Scully, destroyed on the Friday night following. Officers of the Buckingham company have appraised the loss on Mr. Randall's burned building at $1481.25. The carriage, sleighs, &c., were insured in both the Buckingham and Langhorne companies. The former will pay two-fifths of the appraised loss, or $888.50, and the latter three-fifths, or about $1060.

The cottage of Rev. J. D. Acker, in Perkasie Park, caught fire Saturday morning from an oil stove. The fire department of Perkasie was promptly notified but, through a delay, did not succeed in getting the fire under control until nineteen cottages were entirely destroyed. To Canada in a Launch.

Harry J. Shoemaker, Esq., of Doylestown, and a party of friends left Bristol last Saturday morning for Point Abino, Canada, in a naptha launch. After leaving Bristol a stop was made at Tullytown where a number of friends had gathered to greet the travelers. Trenton was the next stop where the Delaware and Raritan canal was entered. From that point New York was to be reached. The route will extend up the Hudson. At Albany the Erie canal will be made use of for 800 miles, touching at Lockport, after which Point Abino, the objective point, the summer home of Mr. Shoemaker, will be reached.

Those who share the pleasure of this outing, as well as the venture, are Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Shoemaker, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Hellyer, and daughters Grace and Carrie; Miss Carrie Rouse, Doylestown; Mr. Haring, New York, and Miss Margaret Campbell, Doylestown.

Jaw Broken in Ball Game.

During the game of base ball being played between Bristol and Burlington last Saturday on the latter's ground, Captain Coyle, of the Bristol team, was struck with the ball and had his jaw broken.

The game had progressed up to the sixth inning and the score stood 1 to 0 in favor of Burlington when Coyle stepped to the bat. Randall sent a swift inshoot and Coyle hit at it. The ball struck the stick a few inches from the batter's hands and quick as a flash travelled up the bat and struck Coyle with terrific force on the upper jaw bone beneath the right eye.

Dr. Dingee, who was on the grounds, made an examination of the injured man and reported that it was a case for the hospital. The injured man was placed on the train and taken to the Cooper Hospital, Camden.

The ball had not only broken Coyle's jawbone, but had crushed it like an egg shell. The skin on the face was not even broken, but a deep hollow place was made in the cheek

Mysterious Victim of Poison.

Mrs. Thomas McManus, aged 36 years, a victim of poisoning, was buried Thursday morning from her home, in Bensalem township, near Langhorne, interment being made at Bristol. It is thought that the unfortunate women committed suicide while mentally deranged.

Death of an Old Resident.

Charles H. Osmand, the pioneer baker of Bristol, dropped dead at his home on Mill street last Thursday afternoon. Heart disease was the cause of death. The deceased was born in Bristol 68 years ago. The interment took place on Sunday at the Episcopal grave yard.

Made a D. D.

Another Barn Burned.

A barn belonging to Henry L Gaw, on the property formerly known as the Hulme farm situated on the Newportville road in Bristol township, was destroyed by fire early Monday morning. The contents of the barn consisted of about six tons of hay and a mowing machine. The origin of the fire is a mystery, but it was presumably the work of incendiaries. The fire occurred shortly after midnight.

Robbed by Negro Footpads.

John Daly, of Bristol, arrived at Columbia Pa., Thursday night from Harrisburg and in passing through the Pennsylvania Railroad freight yard was stopped by two negroes, one of whom presented a revolver at Daly's head and demanded his money. He refused to deliver and was knocked down by the other footpad and robbed of his watch and a sum of money. Two suspected men were taken into custody.

Sturgeon Disappearing.

Unless propagation is resorted to, sturgeon fishing in the Delaware Bay and river will soon be a thing of the past. Such is the opinion of the sturgeon fishermen who have for several years been engaged in the sturgeon fishing business.

The number of sturgeon caught and shipped from Greenwich Piers and Bayside is said to be less than 1,000, as against over 2,100 during the season of 1899, while the number of kegs of caviare from these two points this year was about 800, and last year over 600.

Alumni Reception.

The Bristol High School Alumni held its annual reception last Thursday evening in the assembly room of the High School building. The room was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting. Growing plants, rugs and pictures transformed the room until it had a parlor like appearance. About 100 people were present and the evening spent in social intercourse. Music was furnished by Hall's orchestra, and a number of vocal solos rendered by Miss Margaret Barrett. Among the guests were the recent graduates, the teachers, school directors and their wives.

Telephone Business Booming.

The Bristol exchange of the Delaware & Atlantic Telephone Company is expanding and twelve new 'phones will be added to the list next week. Miss Anna Smith has been added to the "hello" force, making three young ladies who now answer the calls of subscribers. Manager Callanan states that his time is fully occupied in working up business for the company, pouring oil on the troubled waters after an electrical storm, and exercising a general supervision over the affairs of the company. The local exchange will have 98 subscribers after the 12 new ones receive instruments next week. It is the intention now to keep the office open all day on Sundays, and in the very near future an all-night service will be rendered.

A Filipino's Blade for Wanger.

A formidable looking knife came to Congressman I. P. Wanger through the mails from the Phillipines on Saturday. The hilted blade, a bolo, was encased in a leather sheath, and bears evidence of having seen service in the hand of the Filipino soldier from whom it was taken. It was sent to Mr. Wanger by George W. Earl, Jr., of Rosemont, Pa., a Lieutenant in the United States volunteer service in the Philippines. Referring to the rumor that a political malcontent "had the knife out for Wanger," the jocund Congressman said he hoped it was not a weapon of the bolo type.

Describes a Visit to Bristol.

George N. Corson, Esq., of Norristown, wrote the following entertaining letter to the Jenkintown "Times-Chronicle," after his visit to the Bristol Convention, on June 25th:

"With a rising thermometer at 92 we reached Bristol, Bucks county, on Monday with the Montgomery delegation to the joint convention of these two cordial counties. To many of us it was our first visit to the historical old borough by the Delaware. For myself it was a revelation. My first impression in sauntering up Radcliffe street was that it so much resembled old Harrisburg on the Susquehanna, before the modern wealth walked in to tarnish its classic old colonial style; so fine in its simplicity, neatness and solidity. I have often thought what a shame it was that the founders of Norristown did not imitate the example of Bristol and Harrisburg in selecting the banks of the river for its principal places of abode.

"Bristol was full of interest to me; to many it seemed slow and old, and they spoke of it as thoughtless dudes speak of their distinguished daddies, as if they should leave the earth and all their attainments to the scions who never can attain to anything else. My last surviving relative, Richard Corson, having passed from earth and residence in Bristol, and I had none to bid me welcome, Finding myself alone, I was most myself. I found a welcome at the bank, here where for so many years my old friend, Caleb N. Taylor, presided, and here I found his picture on the wall and that of his father and others of that race still in authority in that solitary institution of money in ancient Bristol. There it stands like a diamond stud on the bosom; with four large white columns in front and in the rear, opening to Radcliffe street in the one front and to the broad Delaware river in the other front; for all along the river side of Radcliffe street the houses front the street at one end and the river at the other. I was greeted by 'Tom' Scott'—what is a town without a Tom Scott?—who is Chief of Records here, who introduced me to his father, Charles E. Scott, the cashier of the Farmer's National Bank of Bucks county, established about 1815, and ensconced in this beautiful unpretentious building, erected over 100 years ago by Mr. Biddle, of Philadelphia. It resembles the front of our 'Bank of Montgomery County,' on Main street, always excepting our steps inevitable, but it has no other title engraved upon its forehead than the simple and expressive word: Bank. Oh, that the dawdlers who driveled out our National Platform had only some one who could compress his words into such sententiousness and sense. There is no other bank in Bristol. I was shown the original burglar proof safe! A school boy has a bigger trunk today, and better locked. It is of sheet iron, 80x15 inches, with clasps and padlocks and a great big key! A man might slay a burglar with the key but a thief could put the safe under his arm and roll it down the bank into a boat and row away to Jersey with all the gusto of a brand-new delegate to a Congressional convention. There it sits as silent as the pictures on the wall.

"Pardon me if I seem 'to turn the leaves of memory which make a mournful rustling in the dark.' As I gazed upon the portraits of the Taylors who had reigned here and had passed away, I was lead to mentally cite Longfellow's Haunted Houses and to reflect with him:

"We hold no title deed to house or lands;
Owners and occupants of earlier dates
From graves forgotten stretch their dusty hands,
And hold in mortmain still their old estates."

But I was reminded that a son of the former Congressman and a former client of mine, Caleb N. Taylor, deceased, was now the presiding officer of the bank—Benjamin J. Taylor, Esq, who holds high the prestige of his parentage. Long may the institution live, and may it never have a rival in Bristol.

"It was a happy thought to hold the convention in the historic town of Bristol, the primal county seat and country seat of one of the original counties of the State. The old Delaware House, once the bon-ton of hotels on the banks of the Delaware, which a few years ago fell into some neglect, is now very much alive and very attractive to the traveler. Jeffries, not the tyrant, cruel old Judge, but Jeffries, the jovial, has a fine restaurant on the opposite side of Mill street and facing up the Radcliffe road, the principal avenue of the borough, running parallel with the river and lined with trees full grown and beautiful. The GAZETTE office is in Washington Hall on the left side going up Radcliffe street, with the date of 1847 on the front. The new proprietors, the Thomases, are not of that iconoclastic class like our officers of the Montgomery County Historical Society, who tore down the name of the borough hall they now occupy. Thus is history destroyed by its worshippers. There stands the old name Washington Hall—1847, and there are the three golden links, so significant of the era of which it teaches in silent clasp of link in link and not a written word. Our delegation was fed at Fine's Hotel, several squares up Mill street from the river and the Bucks men bivouacked at Jeffries on the bank.

"The one thing that wins with Wanger is his suitableness; he has the suaviter in modo, the fortiter in re, and nothing of the bossiness about him so common in little men of little minds and lofty aspirations. He has the ability and knows best how to make it available. He is not forever prating I am anti this or anti that—he is Irving P. Wanger, our attorney, mediator and advocate in the Halls of Congress, and knows when to speak and when to keep quiet, and always how to vote. He does not fight a measure or oppose a principle because it is either presented or advocated by another he does not personally love or worship; like a true soldier he supports his government and his commander, and simply looks to see if the flag is in the vanguard; and then he follows, regardless of the views of him who is the mere standard bearer of the emblem of Liberty."

St. Paul Mission Notes.

New stained glass windows will be placed in the Mission.

On Sunday, the 22d inst., Bishop Whitaker will confer the rite of confirmation upon a class of fifty at the Mission.

The annual picnic of St. Paul's Sunday school scholars will take place on the rectory lawn next Saturday afternoon.

The scholars of St. Paul's have raised the funds for the purchase of a new stone font, which will be placed in memory of the late A. Weir Gilkeson.

Rev. T. J. Garland will move into his new home next week. The beautiful mansion, with its spacious lawn on Radcliffe street, known as the Howell property, is being put into first-class condition for the pastor's occupancy.

An addition 16x32 feet will be immediately built to St. Paul's Mission on Jefferson avenue. The improvement has been rendered necessary by the crowded condition of the main room during Sunday school sessions. The new part will be used as an infant room. The alterations will cost about $700.

Trolley Mail Route.

The first car on the new Doylestown-Bristol trolley mail route left Bristol at 6 o'clock on Monday morning in charge of Postal Clerk William Young, of this borough.

There will be two round trips each day, according to the following schedule: Leave Bristol at 6 a. m, and arrive in Doylestown at 8.20 a. m., returning, leave Doylestown at 8.80 a. m., arriving at Bristol at 10.50 o'clock. The afternoon car leaves Bristol at 2 o'clock, reaching Doylestown at 4.30 o'clock, getting to Bristol at 6.50 o'clock.

The Newtown Electric Street Railway Company has fixed up two cars, Nos. 2 and 5, for this postal service and everything was all ready for the opening trip on Monday. On three hundred and six week days in the year there will be two round trips while on seven holidays only one will be made. Ten offices, besides Doylestown and Bristol, will be supplied by these cars and at four of them—Wycombe, Eden, Penn's Park and Newportville—arrangements have been made to have carriers meet the cars and carry the mail to and from the offices. The other offices, not mentioned above, include Furlong, Forest Grove, Wrightstown, Langhorne and Hulmeville.

Dedication of the Presbyterian Sabbath School Buildings.

The handsome new Sabbath school buildings of the Presbyterian Church were dedicated on Friday evening, June 29th, with appropriate ceremonies and an audience that filled the house. The exercises opened with the long metre doxology: "Praise God From Whom all Blessings Flow," followed by the prayer of invocation by the pastor. Then the hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," was sung by the congregation. The scripture lesson, Psalm 84, was read by the Rev. Dr. Nason, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Germantown, Pa. The first address of the evening was entitled, "The Pastor's Salutation," delivered by the present pastor, Rev. Alexander Alison, D. D. In this address he referred to the steps leading up to the event of the evening. He congratulated the congregation that after many years of patient waiting and working the consummation so devoutly wished had been realized. He particularly congratulated all concerned that it was their privilege to dedicate the new buildings free of debt, and expressed the hope that the same joyful exercises in reference to the completed auditorium of the church would be theirs. Then came the ceremony of dedication. Dr. Howard Pursell, the President of the Board of Trustees and Chairman of the Building Committee, stepped forward and presented to the pastor the key of the buildings in a few well-chosen sentences Dr. Alison, on behalf of the session, accepted the same. Then followed the prayer of dedication by the pastor. The dedication address was delivered by the Rev. Charles Wood, D. D., of the Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia. From Dr. Wood the audience expected much; nor was it disappointed. His words were happy and edifying. He emphasized the thought that the churches and buildings of a town have much to do with the town's character and reputation.

"If," said he, "I shall be asked by any one in the future what do you think of Bristol? I shall immediately say if you desire to know what kind of a place Bristol is, just go up there and see the Presbyterian chapel." He also spoke of the influence upon the rising generation of high toned surroundings, and prophesied large things for the Bristol church because the people had built so broadly. Dr. Wood's address was followed by the hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."

An address was expected from Rev. H. F. Lee, of Philadelphia, pastor at Bristol, 1865 to 1868, but a telegram was received from him announcing regretfully his inability to be present.

The Rev. Jacob Weidman, pastor from 1868 to 1873, favored the audience with pleasant reminiscenses. He was followed by the Rev. J H. Mason Knox, D. D, LL. D, pastor from 1873 to 1884, and the Rev. E. P. Shields, D. D., pastor from 1884 to 1897. Both of these gentlemen also indulged in words of beauty in reference to many who had been workers in the Bristol church, some of whom have fallen asleep. It was remarked that the Bristol church was not what could be called a rich church, but it is a church which during its whole existence has faithfully met its obligations. "It always pays," said Dr. Knox, "what it promises." To this Dr. Alison responded by stating that of all the subscriptions taken for the new buildings, not a cent was uncollected. It is usually the case that subscription lists shrink; this one had not. He also stated that among the regular "weekly offering" contributors to the church exposes the delinquent is almost an unknown quantity. During the evening, solos were rendered acceptably by Mrs. E. W. Groom and the Rev. Alexander Alison, Jr.

The services closed with the hymn, "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and the benediction by the Rev. Alexander Alison, Jr., pastor of the Southwestern Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, who was ordained to the ministry from the membership of the Bristol church.

The buildings just dedicated are two in number. One is the adult and the other the primary. The stone used is Holmesburg granite and is exceedingly massive in appearance. The adult building is 60 by 48 feet and has a graceful gallery around three sides of it. There are fifteen beautiful arches and an attractive glass dome in the ceiling. The architectural style is gothic. There are in all twenty-two class rooms besides the central floor space, where there is room for a dozen more classes without crowding. The primary building is 47 by 28 and consists of two stories. On the first floor is the primary proper, an elegantly appointed room with every modern arrangement. There are two very convenient toilet rooms on this floor. On the second floor there are the parlor and pastor's study. The parlor is 20 feet by 24 and the study is 24 feet by 25 in size. The study has built-in book cases, the whole room being finished in quarter oak. The buildings throughout are finished in selected oak. This is true also of the dining room or banqueting hall, which is below the adult auditorium. It is a very large supper room, large enough to accommodate a very large company. A fine kitchen is in the rear. This kitchen is supplied by the Helping Hand Society with a fine gas cooking stove. The buildings are lit all over by gas and electricity, the gas and electricity fixtures (combination chandeliers) being particularly fine. The floors of the new buildings have been covered with the very finest body Brussels carpet and the vestibules with linoleum. The windows are all covered with lightest shades. The chairs, carpets, wall tents, &c., are all most harmoniously blended.

On Sabbath morning and evening, the services of public worship were held in the new buildings. At 2.30 the first Sabbath school session was convened. The services all day were largely attended. The pastor preached in the morning and was assisted in the services by the Rev. Dr Shields and Rev. Dr Wills, of Tacony. At the Sabbath school session the school was addressed by Drs. Shields, Wells and C. E. King. A letter of congratulation was read from F. P. Crichton, of Santa Fe, New Mexico, who was for sixteen years superintendent of the school.

Closing words were spoken by the pastor, who is the present superintendent of the school, which has grown so large that the enrolled membership, after pruning the roll, is now almost 400. The evening service was addressed by the Rev, Dr Shields, the Rev. E. A. Rook, of the Baptist Church, and the pastor.

Races at Newtown.

The horse races at Keith's track, Newtown, yesterday, were the most exciting contests witnessed hereabouts for some time. Postmaster Minster with his crack trotter, Ned W., driven by Charles Cooper, won the laurels of the day and incidentally a hundred dollar purse. A party of Philadelphians with a fleet horse called Amaze, expected to clean up the countrymen but returned home bewildered. George Horn's Martha Brown and William Downing's Florence Boy were also entered. Following is the summary:

A Balance on Hand.

The financial committee which had charge of raising funds for the holding of the Congressional convention in Bristol held a meeting last week and wound up its affairs. About $280 were collected and after paying all bills it was found that there remained a balance of $25 in Treasurer Leedom's hands. The amount left over will be devoted to help pay the expenses of meetings in the fall.

WHERE MY TREASURE IS.

Lord of the living, when my race is run,
Will that I pass beneath the risen sun;
Suffer my sight to dim upon some scene
Of thy good green.

Let my last pillow be the earth I love,
With fair infinity of blue above,
And fleeting, purple shadow of a cloud
My only shroud.

A little lark, above the morning star,
Shall shrill the tidings of my end afar;
The muffled music of a lone sheep bell
Shall be my knell.

And where stone heroes trod the moor of old,
Where bygone wolf howled round a granite fold
Hide thou, beneath the heather's newborn light,
My endless night.

The Crippled Mouse.

And How It Was Released From Its Trap.

BY W. R. ROSE.

It was a dingy little house and stood perhaps 100 feet from the highway. A weed covered pathway led to it, and midway was a well. The great surgeon had caught sight of the well box and was coming up the pathway. He was a connoisseur in water drinking and keenly alive to the possibilities of discoveries along this line of investigation. He drew up the ancient bucket and dipped his pocket cup into it. The water was excellent. The surgeon sampled it with a smile of gratification. Then he drank four cups in rapid succession. As he finished the last he looked toward the house. He meant to remember it. That water was too good to lose track of.

It was just an uncouth, one story building, sadly in need of paint, with a door and window in front and a single chimney from which a lazy line of bluish smoke wavered. For a moment the surgeon saw no sign of life, and then his eye caught sight of a face that appeared a moment at the window. It was a white little face, the face of a child. It disappeared and came again—just a quick vision of baby features and fluffy blond hair—and then was gone.

"A shy little girl," thought the surgeon, as he waved his hand toward the house. A slender hand fluttered above the sill as he turned away.

The great surgeon had come down to Williamston at the earnest solicitation of the capitalist whose summer palace crowned the piny ridge above the little town. The capitalist was a sick man. For the present he needed constant attention—and attention of the most skilled character. The great surgeon was deeply interested in his case. Besides, he felt that he needed a change himself, and he knew there wasn't a better place to recoup than that famous resinous region. So he was for an indefinite time guest as well as physician at the palace on the ridge.

The surgeon was a great walker. There was, to his way of thinking, no gymnastics to compare with this natural exercise of the legs. The horses placed so freely at his disposal had no attraction for him. His delight was to wander away across the ridges and along unfrequented roads, breathing in the aromatic air, and shuffling his feet in the pine needles, and then to come loping back at a brisk pace with his body glowing and a mighty appetite.

He had enjoyed the road over the hill by the lonely home, and he had enjoyed the water from the well, and the next afternoon he went that way again. The dingy little house seemed even more unattractive than it had appeared the day before. The surgeon looked toward it as he drank. Again the little face appeared at the window. This time it did not vanish. On the contrary, the little head nodded as the fluffy curls shook. The surgeon nodded back and went a few paces nearer and smiled and nodded again. Then the little face beamed all over, and the big blue eyes shut and closed rapidly, finally resolving themselves into two staring circles, while the little mouth became a perfect O. Then the tense lines relaxed, a smile rippled across the child's face and the thin hands closed into bony fists that shook themselves at the surgeon in mock defiance.

The surgeon hadn't "made faces" for many years, but now he let his unaccustomed features twist themselves into grotesque shapes that filled the child audience with waves of delight. He had come so close to the dingy house that his head was just on a level with the lower panes in the window.

"Hello," he said to the face within.

A thin little hand motioned downward as a muffled voice said something he could not understand. But he obeyed the motion and looked beneath the sill, and there was an opening a few inches long and perhaps two inches wide, and through this slit four clawlike fingers protruded.

"I see you," said a thin voice through the opening, "I see you stealin our water."

"I'm very sorry," said the great surgeon with his mouth close to the slit.

"You're just sorry 'cause I saw you," cried the thin voice, with a laughing break in it. "You knew well enough it was six glasses for a cent."

The surgeon fumbled in his pocket and brought forth a bright new dime and thrust it through the opening.

"That's 5 cents for water and 5 cents for fine," he gravely announced.

The child laughed merrily.

"I ort to send you right 'straight to jail!" she cried and laughed again; then she suddenly added, "I'm Martha Johnson, goin on 9."

"And I'm Robert Meredith, going on 54," said the great surgeon.

The child looked at him through the glass and gravely bowed; then the blond curls ducked down and the thin voice came through the opening:

"How do you do?"

"Pretty well, thank you," replied the surgeon. "And how do you do?"

"I ain't able to be out yet," laughed the child. "But I can sit up an eat."

"And why can't you go out?"

"'Cause dad locks me in. Dad is th' blacksmith down to the village, an when he goes away in th' mornin he locks everything up with me inside. An so I just stay here an take care o' things—all 'cept th' water. Folks will steal that."

"And are you not very lonesome?" inquired the surgeon.

"I guess I ain't," said the child. "I got my picture books an my dollies, an I can sew an darn some, an once in a long while somebody goes by, like you. An then I'm always thinkin pretty soon daddy will come home, an pretty soon, too, it will be Sunday, an then daddy will be home all day! An when it's most time for him to come I boil th' kittle an lay th' table, an then I get my dear little flag an stick it through this hole—daddy cut it for me, an I call it my postoffice—an wave it, an daddy can see it way down th' road, an then he knows everything is all right."

"But you run out and play sometimes?" queried the surgeon.

The child shook her head at him through the glass.

"No," she called, "I can't run. My feet are bad."

"What's the matter with your feet?"

"They are very bad," replied the child. "They turn in so that when I walk I walk on myself. The boys call me 'clubfoot,' an they laugh. Daddy made me a little cart, an on Sundays he draws me out if it don't rain. An he's goin to whip th' boys if they laugh at me any more."

"Will you let me see your feet?" inquired the great surgeon gently.

"You'll laugh," cried the child.

"No," said the surgeon gravely. "I'll promise you I'll not laugh."

He heard her drawing a chair to the window. He heard her scrambling up. A moment later she tapped on the pane, and then he saw the distorted feet in their coarse yarn stockings poised on the window sill.

"Yes," he called to her. "That will do. And now," he added, "I must go."

"Oh, but you just came," cried the child with sharp regret.

"I'll come again tomorrow," said the great surgeon. "Goodby, little mouse."

There was an added spring to the surgeon's walk as he swung over the hill and so on across the ridge to the capitalist's home, and a fresh sparkle brightened his clear gray eyes.

"By the way," he said to the rich man that evening, "I want to borrow the low phaeton and a steady horse tomorrow."

And so early the next afternoon he drove down into the village and up to the door of the blacksmith shop, and there he and the blacksmith had a long talk. It ended when the blacksmith handed him a key.

That ride in the low phaeton was the great event of Martha Johnson's rather prosaic life. To sit in the softly cushioned carriage by this wonderfully gray haired man, who knew and had seen everything, was a pleasure of such magnitude that it quite took the child's breath away. She was very quiet for a time, and then she broke forth and chattered like a magpie. And the face of the childless man beside her relaxed when he heard her, and pretty soon it would have been quite impossible to tell which was enjoying the ride the better. And when they returned and he tied the horse at the roadside and carried her in—she was only a fragile little bundle—she was quite willing that he should make a careful examination of her crippled feet.

When it was finished, he hurried away to meet a man with whom he had an appointment. The man was the blacksmith, and the blacksmith listened to his story with a troubled face. He was a slow man, was the blacksmith, and not of a hopeful disposition.

"Understand," he said at last in his sluggish way, "I'm a poor man, and I'm in debt. I tried farmin, and it didn't pay, and blacksmithin isn't a great deal better. You'll have to wait a long time for your money."

"Do you imagine I am forcing my services on you?" cried the surgeon sharply. "There'll be nothing to pay."

The blacksmith's lean face clouded.

"Nothin to pay!" he repeated. "What are you doin this for?"

"For science—and my own pleasure," said the great surgeon shortly.

"Well," growled the blacksmith after a little pause, "there is one thing you must understand. Martha's all I've got in the world. There's goin to be no experimentin."

"And there's one thing you must understand," said the surgeon quickly. "There will be no more of this locking an innocent child in a dull old house like a crippled mouse in a trap."

And then the blacksmith, whose heart beneath his rough coating was big and warm, put out his great hand and gave the fingers of the surgeon an eloquent pressure.

That evening the surgeon said to the rich man, "I have an important surgical case in the city on Wednesday and will be gone two days."

It was a pleasant afternoon just three months later, and the blacksmith stood on the little platform of the railway station. He was cleanly shaved and attired in his best, and there was a bright and hopeful look on his face. Back of the platform stood the rich man's carriage and handsome horses, for the great surgeon had gone up to the city the day before and was expected back on the coming train. Presently it rumbled up to the little platform, and a moment later the surgeon emerged from the single passenger car. On his arm leaned a slender little girl, a neatly dressed little girl, who carried a cane and walked a trifle stiffly perhaps, but whose bright face was radiant with happiness.

"Daddy!" she cried as the blacksmith pressed forward and she threw herself in his arms. "Look, look!" she added, and pointed at her feet. And the blacksmith, looking down with moistened eyes, saw that they were straight and trim and neatly shod.

"He did it," said the child as she touched the surgeon's sleeve reverently. "Thank him, daddy; thank him!"

But the great surgeon drew away.

"Pooh, pooh, blacksmith," he quickly said, "a man doesn't want thanks for such a common act of humanity as letting a crippled mouse out of a trap."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Persian Bookstore.

Mr. E. Denison Ross, professor of Persian in University college, London, gives in The North American Review an interesting description of a modern Persian bookstore:

"In every big bazaar a certain number of shops are set apart for the sale of books. In these one finds the bookseller—in his long, dark, outer mantle and his high, black, lambskin hat—seated on the floor, surrounded by his little stock in trade. The front of his shop is open, like a butcher's, while his books are either arranged in shelves against the three walls or in heaps upon the floor. His collection usually consists of lithograph editions of Korans, schoolbooks, favorite poets and historians, but the assortment is limited. Besides these, hidden away in a corner, he often has one or two manuscripts which he has either bought as a speculation or is trying to dispose of for a friend."

Black Diamonds.

Brazil has practically a monopoly of the carbonado, or black diamond, which is used in diamond drills and for other abrasive purposes. It is found in Cape Colony and some other places, but is commercially important only in Brazil.

The great and good do not die even in this world. Embalmed in books, their spirits walk abroad. The book is a living voice. It is an intellect to which one still listens.—Samuel Smiles.

There is always room at the top—and if it's a woman's letter there is always room at the bottom—for a postscript.—Chicago News.

Fairy Literature.

It may be doubted whether those who have not been forced to a liberal reading of fairy stories after they have grown up altogether realize the objections which exist against many of them. On the other hand, it is quite unfair to condemn them all because so many of them carry the supernatural to an objectionable and harmful extreme. It would be a loss to literature indeed to blot out altogether the romance and chivalry which are bound up in the time honored stories of the nursery. Those who contemplate any departure so radical as this can only be counted among those enthusiasts who are always in favor of extreme measures. While there may be valid objections to some of the more bloodthirsty tales and to others of a ghostly and grewsome kind, no one can reasonably object to the land of enchantment, peopled with fanciful creations and miraculous powers, which any child delights to hear about.—Current Literature.

Lacking In Experience.

"I don't see why there is all this opposition to women voting," said a beardless young fellow from his vantage ground beside the Lyceum, watching the women going into the equal suffrage meeting. "It just means that a man has two votes instead of one—his own and his wife's," concluded the youthful sage.

"Young man," questioned a gray veteran Benedict, "are you married?"

"No, no; I'm not married."

"Well, then, you don't know anything about it. It means that the women will have two votes and the men won't have any vote at all."—Memphis Scimitar.

STORY IN FIVE WORDS.

It Told of One of the Most Terrible of Massacres.

Probably the most startling piece of news that was ever sent out into the world was the announcement of the massacre of General Custer and his command in 1876. The terrible news was so unexpected that it came like a bolt from a clear sky. It brought a feeling of sickening horror to the heart of every man who read it or heard it on the street. It passed from lip to lip as it became known in the west and the east. There were friends and relatives of the murdered men in all parts of the nation, and the gallant commander was himself a national hero. For two days the nation waited breathlessly for information regarding the disaster additional to the brief general announcement of the calamity that had been sent out as soon as the news was known in Bismarck, N. D., which was then the extreme northwestern office of the telegraph company. That first message was a brief one; but, after all, it told the whole story.

That message was a bit of "wire talk" sent from Bismarck to Fargo on the morning of July 5, 1876, and it said, "All the Custers are killed." The message was sent by J. M. Carnahan, manager of the Western Union office in Missoula, and it was thus that the news was first sent eastward. From Fargo it was repeated to St. Paul, and St. Paul sent it, in turn, to Chicago, and from there it was passed along to cities, towns and hamlets, telling its brief but terrible story tersely, but completely. There was but a single wire east from Bismarck in those days, and government business had the first call upon this. Consequently Operator Carnahan had only time to flash forward this brief message of general information before he was compelled to begin the transmission of the official report of General Terry to the war department. For 24 hours he sat at his key clicking off this mass of official correspondence. All this time the eastern papers were clamoring for news, but it could not be given to them. So persistent were these demands for news that Mr. Carnahan obtained the permission of Colonel Smith, the member of Terry's staff who had brought in the official dispatches, to make up a short "special" from the information contained in the reports of the officers. This special was sent to the New York Herald and is believed to be the first authentic news of the Big Horn massacre that was sent out, aside from the official dispatches.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

HEBREW SURNAMES.

Most of Them Date Back Only Two Hundred Years.

The family names of European Jews are of comparatively recent origin, mostly from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and the first part of the nineteenth. When they were obliged by law to assume family names they did so either according to their traditional custom, calling themselves Abrahamson, Isaacson, Jacobson, Aaronson, Davidson, Levison or the like, or took the names of their native country, as Sachs, Schwab, Pollack, Baier, Boehm, Schweizer, Tyroler, Oestreicher, Hollaender, etc. Others, again—and these are the majority—named themselves from their native towns, such as Frankfurter, Berliner, Oppenheimer, Posner, Landauer, Fuerther, Marburg, Wetzlar, Erlanger, Bernheimer, etc.

The descendants of Aaron mostly kept up the names of Cohn, Cohen, Cowen or Katz, and the Levites maintained the name of Levi, Levy, Leyb or Brill, the last being composed of the initial letters of Ben Rabbi Jehuda Levi. Some few are translations from the Hebrew: Huebsch and Schoen from Jateh, Wise from Chacham, Weis from Zaban, Roth from Edom. Still there are quite a number of Jewish names much older than the eighteenth century which are evidently not taken from any town or country, also among the German Polish Jews, such as Heller, Mack, Moch, Block, Bloch, etc.

Euphonious and attractive names, both from the fauna and flora of Europe, were frequently chosen. When emigrating to other countries, the bearers of these names would often translate them into the language of their new habitat. Schoenberg became Belmont, Blumenberg changed to Montefiore, Loewenthal to Napoleon, Gutmann to Goodman, etc. The name of Saphir, the German humorist (1795 to 1858), is said to have been chosen by his father from a sapphire he was wearing in a ring and to which the official in court called attention when he was in doubt what name to select for his family.—Baltimore Sun.

Down a Mountain on an Avalanche.

"We were prospecting on a mountain in Vancouver," said a Seattle (Wash.) man. "It was in the spring of the year, and the earth was soft and wet. When about half way up the side of the mountain, without the slightest warning an area about 100 feet square seemed to break loose from the rest and darted with lightning speed down the mountain side. The avalanche seemed to be about five or six feet deep and carried with it trees, rocks and bowlders. Fortunately, myself and companions were close to the upper portion of the sliding land and thus escaped being struck. The ride down the mountain side on that avalanche was the most rapid and perilous one I ever want to experience. I rode astride the trunk of a fallen tree, and my friends were clinging tenaciously to its branches. We covered a distance of about a mile in, I should say, about half a minute, although none of us held stop watches. The avalanche came to a stop near the foot of the mountain in a small valley, and, strange to say, none of us was hurt, save one fellow, who was struck on the leg by a bowlder after we had come to a stop. Talk about rapid transit—that ride beat anything I ever experienced or heard of."—Washington Post.

A Woman's Predicament.

The Chicago Post describes the sad case of a woman who was waiting at the "limits car barn" for an Evanston avenue car. There were plenty of Evanston cars, but her transfer check was good only on the avenue line, and she was determined not to pay another fare.

At last, as night approached, she went to a telephone and called up her husband. She told him the situation—that no Evanston avenue cars seemed to be running, that it was getting dark, and she was afraid. What should she do?

"Why, take an Evanston car," he replied.

"But I shall have to pay another fare," she objected.

"Well, what of it? You don't want to stay there, do you?"

"But I can't," she said and hesitated.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Because—because I haven't any money. I just used my last dime in the telephone to call you up."

And then she wondered at the laugh which reached her ears over the wire.

There Was No Duel.

Colonel Crisp when in the Missouri legislature was one of the central figures in a scene which promised bloodshed, which ended in a hearty laugh and which was the cause of an astounding remark from Hon. John W. Farriss, the then speaker. Crisp and another belligerent son of Anak got into a debate which grew into a quarrel. They shook their fists at each other and roared like a pair of Numidian lions. Everybody expected and many hoped to see a regular old fashioned knockdown and drag out fight, which expectation and hope were frustrated and dashed to the ground by Speaker Farriss remarking:

"If you gentlemen do not quit fussing and take your seats, I will order the chaplain to take you into custody!" which so amazed the bellicose legislators that they stood in a state of lingual paralysis, while the spectators laughed till they were red in the face. Humor saved the day.—Champ Clark in Denver Republican.

Lots of Vowels.

In the Hawaiian language every word ends in a vowel. A Hawaiian finds it almost impossible to pronounce two consonants together, and in English he has the greatest difficulty in pronouncing any word ending with a consonant. Mr. Hale in his Polynesian grammar says: "In all the Polynesian dialects every syllable must terminate in a vowel, and two consonants are never heard without a vowel between them. It is chiefly to this peculiarity that the softness of these languages is to be attributed. The longest syllables have only three letters, and many syllables consist of a single vowel." Again, no syllable, as a general rule, in the Ba-ntu family of African speech can end in a consonant, but only in vowels.

The Jolly Girl

Often changes to the jaded woman. "I can't see what's come over Mary; she used to be such a jolly girl," was the remark of a young woman visiting a married schoolmate. Marriage changes a woman. The drains and pains which are so often the sequence of marriage rob her of all vitality. Give her back her former strength and she'll be as "jolly" a wife as she was a maid. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives back the lost strength by re-establishing the health of the delicate womanly organs. It dries the drains and stops the pains. It cures ulceration, inflammation and female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"For two years I had been a sufferer from chronic diseases and female weakness," writes Mrs. Allen A. Bobson, of 1125 Rodman Street, Philadelphia, Pa. "I had two different doctors, and they gave me medicine which only relieved me for a time. My niece advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I concluded that to open a correspondence with you for your advice would be safest, so I did, and have been highly benefited. I find that after taking six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and five of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and following your advice in regard to local treatment, I am now a strong woman. Accept my sincere thanks for the interest manifested in my case and the happy results obtained."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. Correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.
